Hard Copy Subscription Information

There are three types of hard-copy subscriptions to Military Review as follows:

1. Official subscriptions.

These are subscriptions for U.S. government agencies provided at government expense. Examples of agencies to which official subscriptions are authorized include U.S. military headquarters or units; Congressional offices; offices of other executive branch departments or agencies involved in national security; government-funded libraries; and U.S. embassies. Requests for official subscription may be forwarded to Military Review at the following e-mail address:

leav-milrevweb@conus.army.mil

Written requests may be forwarded under appropriate official letterhead to the following address:

U.S. Army, Combined Arms Center
Combined Arms Center - Knowledge
Military Review
294 Grant Ave. Bldg #77
Fort Leavenworth, Kansas 66027

Requests for official subscriptions should include a brief justification as to why the organization desires a subscription and the number of personnel that are assigned to the office. In the case of a military headquarters or unit, the request should also include how many uniformed military officers and enlisted members the organization has. These justifications and personnel figures are used in a distribution formula to determine how many copies of Military Review may be sent.

Questions may be referred to the offices of Military Review at the following phone number: (913) 684-9327 or DSN 552-9327.

2. Private subscriptions for domestic U.S. locations.

The office of Military Review at Fort Leavenworth does not manage private subscriptions for the publication. As an official publication of the U.S. government, Military Review's subscriptions are managed by the Government Printing Office (GPO). Consequently, requests for private subscriptions must be submitted to the GPO. For more information regarding costs and subscription procedures, inquiries may be sent in writing to the following address:

Superintendent of Documents
